About THE MANSION HOUSE

Set in 375 acres of parkland estate, the Mansion House Tearooms and Restaurant is a fine example of classic Georgian architecture that provides a truly beautiful and classic backdrop to your special day.

A Brief History of The Mansion House

Today's Flamingo Land is founded on the original Yorkshire Zoological Gardens. However, the origin of our 375-acre parkland estate stretches back almost 200 years. Early in the 19th century, King George III commissioned Kirby Misperton Hall as a gift for the Blomberg family. Charles Blomberg had been physician to Charles II, and his descendant, the Reverend F. W. Blomberg – reputedly the natural son of George III – was 'whipping boy' and Chaplain to the Prince Regent. After his death, the estate passed to Captain James Anlaby Legard and subsequently to the Tindall family, who enjoyed the estate for nearly 40 years. During their tenure, the Tindalls consistently employed five or six gardeners who kept the grounds in pristine condition. The three Miss Tindalls, Henrietta, Mary and Jane, always took great pride in walking round the large lake every afternoon.

After the departure of the Tindalls in 1903, the hall was bought by local alderman Colonel J.R. Twentyman. The colonel was determined to create authentic Chinese gardens and Italian piazzas, importing Chinese and Italian labourers to ensure authenticity. Three decades passed peacefully, until the estate was sold to a Mr Ainsworth in 1938 and subsequently occupied by troops during the war years. After the cessation of World War II, the house and its grounds passed to a Mr Tyler of Scarborough before being opened as a country club in the 1950s by Major and Mrs Stone.

However, its destiny was to change forever in 1959 when Edwin Pentland and Frances Hick bought Kirby Misperton Hall and saw the potential for a private animal collection. Unfortunately, Pentland and Hick's finances were rapidly depleted, ultimately requiring funds from public admission to sustain their collection.

During the 1960s, the estate was purchased by Scotia Investments who sold it to the current owners in 1977.

There is a quaint, local church set in the tranquil village of Kirby Misperton that could potentially host your wedding. This church is a very short distance from the Mansion House, and whilst is a pleasant, short stroll, there is also a luxury 14 seater buggy with leather seats that could be available at certain times of the year.

Penguin Ceremony Our Treetop Walkway elevated decking leads to the Penguin Coast exhibit, which is also part of our Civil Licence agreement. This incorporates an attractive, circular wooden structure on the viewing platform, located at an elevated position above the penguin pool. This area can incorporate speakers and be elegantly dressed with drapes, ribbons, lights and/or flowers.
